The paginate function should be done on the Query Builder object, not on the collection returned by get().

The same goes for sorting. When you call <code>get()->sortByDesc()</code>, you are getting a Collection then sorting the collection through PHP. Normally, you would want to use <code>orderBy()</code> in the query builder to sort through SQL.

```
$news = News::leftJoin('categories', 'news.category_id', '=', 'categories.id')
     ->select('news.*' ,'categories.category')
     ->orderBy('created_at', 'DESC')
     ->paginate(10);

thank you but it getting error Call to undefined method Illuminate\Database\Query \Builder::links() now. how to show pagination at my view? i've been use this code  ${{\text{snews->links()}}}$  - rafitio Nov 9, 2016 at 23:16

You're missing something here, it's saying $news is still a query builder object instead of a paginator object. – Devon Nov 9, 2016 at 23:19

Use Eloquent: Relationships

O For example:

News.php model

```
1
```

```
class News extends Model
    {
        protected $primaryKey = 'id';

        function withCategories() { return $this->hasOne('App\Categories', 'id', 'category_id');
     }

    public function list(){
        News::with('withCategories')->orderBy('created_at', 'DESC')
        ->paginate(10);
     }
}
```

in news.blade.php (example)
